

Am characters on the check and affixed to the housing at the document slot and in communication with the processor, an imaging device for capturing an image of the check and affixed to the housing at the document slot and in communication with the processor, a printing device configured to print on the check received in the document slot wherein the processor is programmed to process multiple payment types including processing a checking account transaction when the check is placed in the document slot, the method comprising:

printing a money order for a consumer with the printing device; capturing an image of the money order with the imaging device; and sending the image of the money order to a host as a receipt for the money order.
